

Thomas Partner Highlight: Hannaford: Why Consider an Advanced Degree

Getting a graduate degree has always been a goal of mine but it's something that, you know, you put on the back burner when you start having a life, and a career, and children, and whatnot.

And the cost, you know, obviously is something to consider. So, when Hannaford came out with the groceries to grads program it immediately piqued my interest. But then, to see the first class was free, and then doing the math and seeing the 10 percent discount, and then Hannaford all provides over five thousand dollars a year in reimbursement; I was going to be able to get an MBA for half the cost of a typical program.

So, to me, looking at all those factors it was a no-brainer. I immediately applied and told my wife and my supervisor. They were extremely excited about it, and I would have to say if it wasn't for that Partnership of Thomas College and Hannaford, I wouldn't be sitting here answering these questions right now. That really tipped the scale for me, to say this, all signs point to you doing this right now.
