

Thomas Partner Highlight: MIAA: Hiring with a Graduate Degree

Higher education plays such a large role in our organization. Both my husband Matt and I are Thomas alums. We graduated in 1999, and we credit our success in our small business from the lessons that we learned and our degrees that we received from Thomas College.

So, anytime someone applies for a position within our office that has a degree in higher education, the quality and commitment to their work and to themselves really are the values that we look for in employees.

So, we really place a higher value on someone that has taken the time and dedication to go out there and get a degree for themselves, start something that really ends up being, you know you have to have help along the way, but a really, truly self-motivated achievement.

And that, I think, is really great value that you want to employ in your office and organization.
